Reflection: Mission Sunday is a day for us to reflect on the contribution we, as Irish people, have made to this mission in the past and how we live it today.

Mission was understood as going abroad, to countries where people suffered from poverty or conflict. This is indeed still necessary and valid today, and we pray people will continue to give their lives to mission in this way.

Mission was also seen as the task primarily of priests and religious, with some few lay missionaries, and their work was very much supported by the generosity of the Irish people.

Pope Francis today is encouraging all the baptized to more actively assume their responsibility as "missionary disciples". Many Catholics in Ireland, especially among our youth, see little relevance of the faith in their lives. Hence, a challenge for all of us as Catholics is to take the time to seriously reflect on our faith experience, seek to become more knowledgeable about the Scriptures and some of the teachings of the Church, ask ourselves questions about it and seek to articulate it meaningfully to ourselves and others, and then base our action on our experience of the faith. Mission is essentially faith in action and to this we as baptized are called to be committed.

There are many ways in which people live mission today, both in Ireland and overseas.

These include being involved in action to prevent trafficking, various kinds of social and community work with the poor and marginalised, reaching out to refugees and migrants and action to care for the earth. Some of those people who are engaged in these activities may not profess a formal Christian faith, but it is evident that their activities are inspired by Gospel values and they are promoting the reign of God.

Tuesday 22nd October is the Feast Day of St
John Paul II who was Pope from 22nd
October 1978 until his death on 2nd April 2005. He is remembered with great affection
as the Pilgrim Pope, who visited one hundred and four countries, including his apostolic journey to Ireland from September 29th—October 2nd 1979

Come, let us praise the Lord,
Let us sing for joy to God who protects us. Let us come before him with thanksgiving and sing joyful songs of praise. Psalm 95

Lord, make me an instrument of your peace:
where there is hatred, let me sow love;
where there is injury, pardon;
where there is doubt, faith;
where there is despair, hope;
where there is darkness, light;
where there is sadness, joy.
O divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console,
to be understood as to understand,
to be loved as to love. For it is in giving that we receive, it is in pardoning that we are pardoned, and it is in dying that we are born to eternal life.
